Hi Traci,

I hope you're having a great week!

Here's the start to a submission on the Terwilliger Fire. I'll run this by Forest Public Affairs staff as well to get their input, but let me know what else you may want, whether its further developing out a certain topic area, photos, etc.

Thank you for the opportunity to contribute!

P.S. Ron's email wouldn't pull up for me for some reason so I wasn't able to include him on this email.

PARTICIPANT INVITATION

INVITATION to TEAM EDITORS

After our long fire season, we are working now to reflect on the lessons learned in the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. And as part of this reflection, we invite you to submit your insights and summary from your forest as we craft a Story Map and a concise Season Narrative.

Our plan is build a Story Map narrative and analysis of the 2018 wildland fire season, building on the insights you may have in your subject-matter expertise, in your district or sub-region.

To help guide this process, we include a list of Key Themes, Focusing Questions, and a Leaders Intent and Assumptions statement, and a proposed outline/template. We seek from 1-3 pages (400-1000 words, about as long as this invitation letter), and we will share proposed topics below. And we will share an outline/template for those who agree to write an original analysis.

Many of you may have already written a short summary. If so, simply send us a copy and we will incorporate your work in this publishing process.

If you are in progress of conducting a season summary, or if you seek to write an original analysis/reflection for this fire season narrative, we encourage you to review the themes, questions and topics below. Identify two to three of the Key Themes and associated Focusing Questions that apply most closely to your region, sub-region and/ or subject area, and allow those themes and questions to help guide your response.

We seek to develop this as an intertwined series of documents, in Story Map and PDF format.

These themes and questions grew from discussions that occurred throughout the fire season and are not definitive or meant to limit the focus. Nor are these designed to replace any other after action review or narrative that you compile post-season. In fact, we hope you share your analyses in progress, so we can build the most current reflection.
